The conductor was perplexed. Conductor: Who on earth would want to steal a Pullman ladder? The porter said he didn't know. But it was certain the ladder was gone.

Just then the curtains of the upper berth parted and a little old lady poked her head through cautiously.

Old lady: Porter, you may use mine if you like. I won't need it until morning.

"A letter from my wife tells me that she is all unstrung. What do you suggest that I do?"

"Send her a wire."
IT'S YOU

If you'd like to live in the kind of a town,
Like the kind of a town you'd like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip,
And take a long, long hike;
You'll only find what you've left behind,
There's nothing that's really now;
You knock yourself when you knock your town--
It isn't the town, it's you!

Real towns are not made by men who're afraid,
Lost some one else gets ahead.
If everyone worked and nobody shirked,
A town can be raised from the dead.

And if, while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbor can make one too.
Your town will soon be what you want to see--
It isn't the town, it's you!

BILL: She certainly is magnetic.

JACK: Little wonder. Everything she's got on is charged.

"Do you mean to say you worked all night? I wouldn't have dreamed of it."

"Neither would I—the boss thought of it."
