

COVINGTON, KENTUCKY, MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1912.

[illegible]

expression of gratitude to heaven they sat down to their frugal repast. It was in that solemn silence which sorrow imposes upon the surcharged heart, like the brimming goblet, requires but the slightest touch to make it overflow with tears. It was probably the last time the father would ever break bread with his family.

The hour of prayer arrived, and oh! with what earnestness did the parent wrestle with Heaven, for the redemption of the young and helpless he was leaving behind. The parents shed copious tears from the overflowing sensibilities of nature, and the children wept from sympathy and from an unfeigned sensation of evil, which they could not comprehend. And there was relief in those tears, and the strengthening efficacy of prayer calmed the tumult of the breast, and poured a soothing balm into the wounded feelings, which was not of earth.

The children were put to rest. The father kissed them affectionately as they lay sleeping in similar positions, and with reassurance they were about to sustain—embraced his disconsolate wife again and again.

beside him. The stranger had heard his pious petitions, and with kind solicitude inquired into the nature of his journey, and all the little particulars of his history. He then took him home, and having entertained him for the night, sent him on to Springfield in the care of a friend. The officer, (for it was an officer of justice, in whose care the stranger placed him) conducted him to Springfield, and the trial began.

The country was then struggling against a sea of troubles, and compelled to restrict the agency of treason, by prompt and condign punishment. The crime of the prisoner was substantiated by ample proof—he even admitted it himself, and was accordingly sentenced to death. The severity of the sentence, however, the President put the question whether, pardon should be granted.

Scarcely had he ceased speaking, when a member occupied the floor, and in that spirit it which the temper of the times appeared to demand, portrayed in glowing language the agonizing sufferings of the unhappy slave, and his temptations to rebellion.

“I don't think it,”

“We took the responsibility of advising the boy not to fulfil his errand, and returned him with him. The family, we found, were the friends of the humble children; the eldest (the Boy) was not more than twenty years of age, while the youngest was an infant a few months. It was a cold, blistering day. The North wind howled harshly, and came, roughly and unbidden, through the timbered crevices of the poor man's log cabin. A large number of the people were placed around which were huddled the half naked children; and the woe stricken mother and wife. ‘Her face was haggard—her eyes sunken—her hair dishevelled—her clothes tattered and unclean.’

“The mother sat in a broken chair, and was mechanically swinging to and fro, as if endeavoring to quiet her infant, which moaned pitifully in its mother's arms. It had been sick from its birth, and it was now seemingly struggling to free itself from the arms of its mother. ‘Such it had, but a few months previous, been a laughing, frolicsome, and happy child.’

“No tear in the eye of the mother. No sob in “Aston as he saw me he bawled and curse, and swear. It was his. He appeared to be in a great I could understand was ‘birdie birdie!’ I asked for water. I was asked by the mother what troubles the boy had. ‘You have shot his little bird—been tamed, and that he had fed every day.’ This cured me. A Reader, don't shoot the ‘pet’ not mainly, nor humane, nor wise.”

A SIOUX SMOKE.—Written in good earnest! The Scripture says: poor ye have always with you: ye are sitting round your good cases, and ye say, ‘Sign ye to us, brother or sister make us a hungry. A load of wood or a little take little from your place, thanks of the hungry fat, the wretched, the shivering frame warmed and hope, will repay you to God. He who giveth to the poor lendeth

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE YODMAN.—A man who stands upon his dignity, who feels that the laws of the land in which he dwells are his, and that he is the rightful and exclusive owner of the land which he tills, is, by the constitution of our nature, under a wholesome influence, not easily imbibed from any other source. He feels—other things being equal—strongly than another, the character of man as an individual and animate world. Of this kind a wonderful sphere, which, fashioned by the hand of God, and upheld by his power, is rolling through the heavens, a portion is his,—his sphere, and he is bound to his place, on which the generations before him have, in its round duties; and he feels himself connected, by a visible link, with those who preceded him, as he is, also to those who will follow him, and to whom he is to transmit a home. Perhaps his farm has come down from his grandfather's fathers. They were gone to their rest, home, but, as they have took up his musket, and, aided by the shades of night, started for the British camp. As he pursued his way, the moon that had been obscured, broke forth from the surrounding clouds, and, on the instant, illumined his dwelling, the lamp shone through the open door in which his wife still stood to catch the last echo of his footsteps. The light of heaven and of faithful love he felt were united to cheer him on his journey.

On the eve of the following day he preached Boston, he fell in with the accents of the American army then parading in the vicinity, and his answers not proving satisfactory, he was dismissed and taken before the proper officers. He did not show any intention, but made known his determination of joining the royal army. He was accordingly sent up into the country and lodged in a goal in one of the western towns to await his trial. The place was about thirty miles from his own house, and the journey of interest transpired was made known through the different committees of correspondence, and the streets, the slaughter of their brethren in one of Lexington and Concord, and the confignation of Charleston by the vandal torch of the invaders. He then spoke of the British as the cause of the center-of-the-power the foe with whom they were grappling; and concluded by expressing a hope that not a member there would sacrifice the great interests of the country by granting impunity to the subtle and destructive agency of the recreant traitor.

He received a similar sentiment with equal warmth; and the unfortunate man ceased to indulge a hope. For himself he dreaded not death; but in the yearnings of nature, his heart trembled for his wife and children, and consequently he was not without a certain melancholy. He did not weep—he bent rest his head, but stood erect; and pale as monumental marble, while his thoughts, abstracted from things around him, were with his family, and with that God, who is the protector of the widow and the orphan, zed upon the expiring babe. The fountain had been long before, dited up by the internal fires which alcohol had kindled, and fed. Yet she was a picture of despair, and we could not but be struck with the contrast of her mind was wandering back to the happy past—The days of her infancy and girlhood, and her early home. Poor thing! She had given her affections and her hand to a man who had taken the first steps in intemperance, and had taken her to a life of woe and pain. Her hopes never to be realized—to spend a life of misery with a sot. Broken heart—cast out from the society of her former friends—torn down by the “good society” of the drunkards and misers—she was a wife of a miserable drunkard—she could not help, no heart to pity—the very soon became a tippler and a drunkard herself.

By the side of this five-oxen mother knelt a little girl of over six years, with her hair parted and bound in curls, and with her eyes ever and anon exclaimed, “Poor little Willie, must you die?”

footstep over the daily scene of his labor. The roof which shelters him, was reared by those to whom he owes his being. Some interesting domestic tradition is connected with the building of the house, and the occasion was planted by his father’s hand. He expated, in his boyhood, by the side of the brook, which still winds through his meadow—Through that field, lies the path to the village church of his earliest days. He still looks on his father’s house, and the old bath which, called his father to the house of God; and near at hand is the spot where laid his parents down to rest, and where he trusts, that his life is come, he will be able to tell his children of the scene. He is the feelings of the owner of the scene. Words cannot paint them; gold cannot buy them—they flow out of the deep fountains of the heart—they are the life-spring of a fresh, healthy, generous national character.

Do not seek to tell him you know what to do with her.

“My dearer, some of our friends say that the Lord is coming in mercy on the 22d of April next, and that, and the elements of the world. They say they shall want that date, and are consequently tilling their fields, and suffering them to waste. Now my friends, I am very unwise, even supposing the Lord should come, and the world be destroyed. The Lord should be treated with his greatness and majesty. My point, and I shall paint, my friends, and I shall repair them; they disappear at the time appointed, he be decently received.”

A good Toot, whoever made the above, and the order to the heads of their little ones, must lay their forms.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem clearly. This involves identifying the symptoms, the scope of the problem, and the impact it is having on the organization. Once the problem is defined, the next step is to gather information about the problem. This can be done through interviews, surveys, and other research methods. The information gathered should be used to identify the causes of the problem and to develop a plan of action to address the problem. The final step in the process is to implement the plan of action and to monitor the results. This involves setting up a system of controls to ensure that the plan is being followed and that the problem is being resolved. Once the problem is resolved, the system of controls should be reviewed and updated as needed to prevent the problem from recurring.

THE UNDER-SIGNED do hereby publish a MAP OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA to be carefully laid down all the most interesting and useful information heretofore published, to be used by the Army, Navy, and the present United States Surveyors entirely clothed in the United States & Territories, which will be very full and complete, and in addition the Missouri and Oregon Territories, and the whole of the continent. It will be four feet ten inches by five feet four inches, elegantly engraved, each County distinguished by a different color, the principal Rail Roads, Canals, Public Thoroughfares, and the principal cities. It will be embellished with the Portraits of all the Presidents, and the whole con-

The largest and most elegant Map illustrating the States in this country. It will be offered to all members only, at the low price of SEVEN DOLLARS.

The Map will be accompanied by a STATISTICAL GAZETTEER OF THE UNITED STATES, containing an Alphabetical List of all the Cities, Towns, Villages, &c., and of the Unions designating the County and State in which they are situated; the distance from the Capital, Washington; the population in 1840, all the Forts, Castles, and garrisons each for the year 1841, and a Table of the principal Rivers, with their lengths and courses, and the names of the principal cities or towns upon them. The Constitution of the United States, and the Declaration of Independence, are also printed in English and French. Fourteen Thousand copies. The Constitution together with a short sketch of the History of the Republic, a Synopsis of the Constitution and words of the President, and, finally, their Internal Improvements, paper bound in different periods, and recent works for sale.

plates containing much valuable statistical information respecting the Commerce of the United States, the Public Land of the United States, compiled by the Census of 1841, and Public Documents. No pains or expense will be spared to make the work a complete and accurate description of the Union. It will contain over 1000 pages printed on good paper, and new type procured expressly for the purpose, bound in durable cloth, and more, and is published at the price of Two Dollars and twenty cents per copy, or Two Dollars per copy taken with a single advance on delivery.
