

LICKING VALLEY REGISTER.

EDWARD C. LANGDON, EDITOR.

GOVINGTON, KY.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1843.

"We call the reader's attention to an article on our fourth page, headed 'Catholics', Let it be read by all, Protestants, Catholics, Jews and Gentiles... We borrow the matter from the 'Orthodox Preacher,' and lay it before our readers, because it should be extensively read."

Ladies' Repository.

The March number of this interesting periodical is, as usual, replete with the useful and the entertaining. This is one of the cheapest and best publications in the Union. It is edited by a gentleman of great worth, and acknowledged merit, and its contributors are among our best writers. The style and beauty of work is truly elegant. Published at the Methodist Book Concord, Cincinnati, at two dollars only, per annum.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.—A few days past as we were passing along by the premises of a highly respectable widow lady, she called to us, "Why don't you send in your receipt for my paper; it has been due since December, and you have not sent for your subscription?" We remarked, "In reply, we would send her the receipt in a short time." "No," said she, "I've just got the money, here, and you may as well take it now," and she handed us over a dollar bill; and never did two dollars come more opportunely, for it just happened, (as is usually the case!) we were out of market money. If our subscribers generally, could follow this praiseworthy example, we would not only live our lives, but have a mile or two, to give the poor, these hard times.

The Poor.

This is the time to call forth the sympathies of humanity; to awaken in the breast of the philanthropist a feeling of commiseration that should carry with it relief to the poor and suffering. There are among us many, who having heretofore been able to provide for themselves, cannot now obtain work upon any terms, and are in a suffering condition. What a rich man leaves of surplus food at his dinner table, would supply at least one family for a week, day, and how much happiness would it impart. The poor do not go hungry, because there is no abundance of provisions among us, neither is it because we have not a generous and kind hearted community; but it is want of reflection, and because these miseries are not general immediately before them.—Many of our suffering poor, have too much Kentucky pride, to go from house to house and make their condition known; they have never before been reduced to such an extremity, and they know not how to begin, but say kindness offered them would be received with lavish-est gratification, and a shower of blessings called down on the head of those offering such relief. If some of our wealthy friends, who give large and expensive parties, would only humbly consider for a moment, and turn their social feelings into a charitable channel, and with such care feed the famishing mother and children of want, they would do double duty in the act, and their prosperity increased, besides the satisfaction of gratifying a good conscience.

Since writing the above, we have learned a sad piece of news. A family in this City, are reduced to a state of extreme suffering, by means used by a crowd of scoundrels, (many of whom are of color,) to extort money from the poor individuals repaired to their miserable abode, and profited relief, which was at first given. My refusal, thinking that their visitors wished to remove them to the Poor House, their pride was aroused; but upon proper explanation, and that this was made in kindness, and not to subject them to additional mortification, their kindness was most graciously received. Let those who feel the stirrings of humanity in their breasts, and disposed to lend to the Loan, by giving to the poor, call on friend, Mr. Lowry, (Holder and Lowry,) and he will direct them to the place.

A severe outbreak was committed on Friday night, the 17th inst., on Mr. JAMES CLAW, Street Commissioner, by one Joseph O'FERR. Mr. Claw had been attending to conveying the U. S. Mail across the river, and on returning home, late at night, and near his own house, was attacked, and beaten in a most barbarous manner. No particular cause can be assigned for this outrage, unless because Mr. C. had a warrant against the fellow. He is held to bail in $1000 to stand his trial at the next Circuit Court, and in $1000 to keep the peace.

A severe outbreak was committed on Friday night, the 17th inst., on Mr. JAMES CLAW, Street Commissioner, by one Joseph O'FERR. Mr. Claw had been attending to conveying the U. S. Mail across the river, and on returning home, late at night, and near his own house, was attacked, and beaten in a most barbarous manner. No particular cause can be assigned for this outrage, unless because Mr. C. had a warrant against the fellow. He is held to bail in $1000 to stand his trial at the next Circuit Court, and in $1000 to keep the peace.

A confirmation has been handed him, complaining of a certain individual (whose name we have) insulting and abusing freely and indecently, in public, at the M. E. Church. We can assure the writer of the communication, (whose name is with us,) that if the fault should be repeated, his person shall be held up to that public mark of indignation, his business justly meets.

We are credibly informed, that the law of Ohio, imprisons non-residents for debt, the body bound. This is certainly a good act done by the Ohio Legislature.

EDUCATIONAL.

HIGH SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

MEN'S COLLEGE, PRINCIPAL, Mr. Wm. W. Atkinson, Miss DEAN, Asst.

THE exhibition of the Public Schools of the City of Covington, under the superintendence of the City Council, was on the evening of the 23d, in the Baptist Church—and fully sustained the high reputation of its patrons, and the people generally. We speak the undivided opinion of all classes and conditions that witnessed this extraordinary display. When we say that never before in this City, and as far as we are advised, any where else, was it excelled, if equalled.

We wish the Kentucky Legislature had been present—the high demonstration would have satisfied the most sceptical of the power and influence of our schools.

The east circuit listened with profound and respectful attention, while the little girls and boys were struggling for victory, for honor and glory. It was a proud night for our city. It was a glorious night for the reputation and character of our City Authorities. It was a night that will be remembered, and their effects felt for generations to come.

The boys were contending for valuable books, offered by the City at prize. The Rev. Professor Drury, Rev. Mr. Light, Rev. Mr. Moore, and Rev. Mr. Dunning were the judges. We believe public opinion and the judges concur in the awards. We shall not mention the names of the boys—when the prizes were awarded, however, there names are in the mouths of all.

James M. Preston, Esq., the chairman of the Visiting Committee, addressed the people in a short and eloquent manner the opening. His speech was full of sound practical illustration, and touching incidents. We would be glad to have a copy of it published.

The people are under-standing obligations to the other Visitors, Mr. Benton, Mr. Gedge, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Beers for their untiring efforts on behalf of the school.

COVINGTON CLASSICAL ACADEMY.

R. H. JONES.

Of the Visiting Committee appointed by the Covington State Quarterly Conference, to visit, and be present at the examination of the above Academy.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was commenced under the superintendence of Rev. J. L. Karp, and his appointment to a Professorship in Transylvania University, has been under management of Rev. F. H. Blakes, a graduate of August College. The first commencement under Mr. Blakes, took place on the 16th inst. We attended the examination, and it afforded us great pleasure to see, that the young gentlemen and youth who have been educated here, though mainly in their composition and manners, in the comparative infancy of this Institution, did much credit to themselves and their preceptors. The class rec'd in Latin, Greek and French, gave evidence of great proficiency; and the lower branches, gave additional assurance that they were laying the foundation of a permanent and liberal education.

We are decidedly of the opinion that as thorough an education can be obtained in this Academy, as any "similar institution with a circle of our acquaintances, Covington presents as many claims for prominence in the establishment of Seminaries of learning, in any City in the West." We are anxious to see it grow in its character.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was founded by a company of extraordinary persons of foreign extraction, who had a common fund guarantee, that the moneys of those sent to the Covington Classical Academy, will be "strictly guarded, and there will be no encumbrances placed upon them, in any way, to interfere with their use." Our friends, who have largely participated, offer a sum guarantee, that the moneys of those sent to the Covington Classical Academy, will be "strictly guarded, and there will be no encumbrances placed upon them, in any way, to interfere with their use."

The religious lessons thus communicated, offer arrangements for defense, by clearing away the orchards below the fort, putting some light artillery in advance of our lines, &c., &c. But as General Joseph Jones' command, our commander was "incapable" of the efforts required eq: such an emergency, and we were without a head to direct, or even to sanction a vigorous defense. Our little army was composed of good materials, but without the skill and energy of officers, perhaps not much confidence could be placed in them, on the occasion required still I believe that Col. Miller had assumed the command, he would have been in the extent of our abilities. Even as our men were placed I believe the British would have met a narrow reception than they expected; but the die was cast, without a word of consultation, for as my knowledge extends, I was perhaps the youngest officer in Hull's army, yet I seemed to have him unfolded confidence up to that hour; but the idea of a surrender never occurred to me, either from thought or action, until the flag of truce was raised; and when I largely enquired the object of it, he was evidently disconcerted by my unusual look. If any officer had commanded the command, and been defeated, the result would have been considered as his reputation destroyed, and his life forfeited;—and the result was unfortunate to the best of it. We see how masters are discussed at the present day; the bold measures which preserved New Orleans; and the prompt suppression of the Somer's mutiny have been condemned by thousands. Men who would fly from the glimpse of an enemy, can fight our battles and accomplish wonder's in the chimney corner, and the most devoted patriot may be doomed to disgrace, for a single error in his judgment.

The surrender of Detroit was a gloomy affliction to our country—and especially to those who went off for glory, and returned with shame. Our friends were not disappointed in their expectations of a glorious victory. They had been deceived by their superior officers, and nothing but wilful ignorance can account for the continual repetition of the cry,

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.
Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

ILLUSTRATION.

Longwood, N.Y., Feb. 20, 1843.

R. C. LANGDON.

Sir.—As my account of High's Surrender was published in your paper, will oblige me by inserting the enclosed letter of Gen. Jessup, with the following remarks:

My main object in publishing the circumstances connected with that important event, was to place the historical truth of the matter before the world, and with the result of the review which you have so far had, have no objection in the fact.

My account of it was written, probably, in a spirit of sympathy with the people of all classes and conditions that witnessed this extraordinary display. When we say that never before in this City, and as far as we are advised, any where else, was it excelled, if equalled.

We wish the Kentucky Legislature had been present—the high demonstration would have satisfied the most sceptical of the power and influence of our schools.

The east circuit listened with profound and respectful attention, while the little girls and boys were struggling for victory, for honor and glory.

It was a proud night for our city. It was a glorious night for the reputation and character of our City Authorities. It was a night that will be remembered, and their effects felt for generations to come.

The boys were contending for valuable books, offered by the City at prize. The Rev. Professor Drury, Rev. Mr. Light, Rev. Mr. Moore, and Rev. Mr. Dunning were the judges. We believe public opinion and the judges concur in the awards. We shall not mention the names of the boys—when the prizes were awarded, however, there names are in the mouths of all.

James M. Preston, Esq., the chairman of the Visiting Committee, addressed the people in a short and eloquent manner the opening. His speech was full of sound practical illustration, and touching incidents. We would be glad to have a copy of it published.

The people are under-standing obligations to the other Visitors, Mr. Benton, Mr. Gedge, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Beers for their untiring efforts on behalf of the school.

COVINGTON CLASSICAL ACADEMY.

R. H. JONES.

Of the Visiting Committee appointed by the Covington State Quarterly Conference, to visit, and be present at the examination of the above Academy.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was commenced under the superintendence of Rev. J. L. Karp, and his appointment to a Professorship in Transylvania University, has been under management of Rev. F. H. Blakes, a graduate of August College. The first commencement under Mr. Blakes, took place on the 16th inst. We attended the examination, and it afforded us great pleasure to see, that the young gentlemen and youth who have been educated here, though mainly in their composition and manners, in the comparative infancy of this Institution, did much credit to themselves and their preceptors. The class rec'd in Latin, Greek and French, gave evidence of great proficiency; and the lower branches, gave additional assurance that they were laying the foundation of a permanent and liberal education.

We are decidedly of the opinion that as thorough an education can be obtained in this Academy, as any "similar institution with a circle of our acquaintances, Covington presents as many claims for prominence in the establishment of Seminaries of learning, in any City in the West." We are anxious to see it grow in its character.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was founded by a company of extraordinary persons of foreign extraction, who had a common fund guarantee, that the moneys of those sent to the Covington Classical Academy, will be "strictly guarded, and there will be no encumbrances placed upon them, in any way, to interfere with their use."

The religious lessons thus communicated, offer arrangements for defense, by clearing away the orchards below the fort, putting some light artillery in advance of our lines, &c., &c. But as General Joseph Jones' command, our commander was "incapable" of the efforts required eq: such an emergency, and we were without a head to direct, or even to sanction a vigorous defense. Our little army was composed of good materials, but without the skill and energy of officers, perhaps not much confidence could be placed in them, on the occasion required still I believe that Col. Miller had assumed the command, he would have been in the extent of our abilities. Even as our men were placed

I believe the British would have met a narrow reception than they expected; but the die was cast, without a word of consultation, for as my knowledge extends, I was perhaps the youngest officer in Hull's army, yet I seemed to have him unfolded confidence up to that hour; but the idea of a surrender never occurred to me, either from thought or action, until the flag of truce was raised;

and when I largely enquired the object of it, he was evidently disconcerted by my unusual look. If any officer had commanded the command, and been defeated, the result would have been considered as his reputation destroyed, and his life forfeited;—and the result was unfortunate to the best of it. We see how masters are discussed at the present day; the bold measures which preserved New Orleans; and the prompt suppression of the Somer's mutiny have been condemned by thousands. Men who would fly from the glimpse of an enemy, can fight our battles and accomplish wonder's in the chimney corner, and the most devoted patriot may be doomed to disgrace, for a single error in his judgment.

The surrender of Detroit was a gloomy affliction to our country—and especially to those who went off for glory, and returned with shame. Our friends were not disappointed in their expectations of a glorious victory. They had been deceived by their superior officers, and nothing but wilful ignorance can account for the continual repetition of the cry,

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.
Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

ILLUSTRATION.

Longwood, N.Y., Feb. 20, 1843.

R. C. LANGDON.

Sir.—As my account of High's Surrender was published in your paper, will oblige me by inserting the enclosed letter of Gen. Jessup, with the following remarks:

My main object in publishing the circumstances connected with that important event, was to place the historical truth of the matter before the world, and with the result of the review which you have so far had, have no objection in the fact.

My account of it was written, probably, in a spirit of sympathy with the people of all classes and conditions that witnessed this extraordinary display. When we say that never before in this City, and as far as we are advised, any where else, was it excelled, if equalled.

We wish the Kentucky Legislature had been present—the high demonstration would have satisfied the most sceptical of the power and influence of our schools.

The east circuit listened with profound and respectful attention, while the little girls and boys were struggling for victory, for honor and glory.

It was a proud night for our city. It was a glorious night for the reputation and character of our City Authorities. It was a night that will be remembered, and their effects felt for generations to come.

The boys were contending for valuable books, offered by the City at prize. The Rev. Professor Drury, Rev. Mr. Light, Rev. Mr. Moore, and Rev. Mr. Dunning were the judges. We believe public opinion and the judges concur in the awards. We shall not mention the names of the boys—when the prizes were awarded, however, there names are in the mouths of all.

James M. Preston, Esq., the chairman of the Visiting Committee, addressed the people in a short and eloquent manner the opening. His speech was full of sound practical illustration, and touching incidents. We would be glad to have a copy of it published.

The people are under-standing obligations to the other Visitors, Mr. Benton, Mr. Gedge, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Beers for their untiring efforts on behalf of the school.

COVINGTON CLASSICAL ACADEMY.

R. H. JONES.

Of the Visiting Committee appointed by the Covington State Quarterly Conference, to visit, and be present at the examination of the above Academy.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was commenced under the superintendence of Rev. J. L. Karp, and his appointment to a Professorship in Transylvania University, has been under management of Rev. F. H. Blakes, a graduate of August College. The first commencement under Mr. Blakes, took place on the 16th inst. We attended the examination, and it afforded us great pleasure to see, that the young gentlemen and youth who have been educated here, though mainly in their composition and manners, in the comparative infancy of this Institution, did much credit to themselves and their preceptors. The class rec'd in Latin, Greek and French, gave evidence of great proficiency; and the lower branches, gave additional assurance that they were laying the foundation of a permanent and liberal education.

We are decidedly of the opinion that as thorough an education can be obtained in this Academy, as any "similar institution with a circle of our acquaintances, Covington presents as many claims for prominence in the establishment of Seminaries of learning, in any City in the West." We are anxious to see it grow in its character.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that this Institution was founded by a company of extraordinary persons of foreign extraction, who had a common fund guarantee, that the moneys of those sent to the Covington Classical Academy, will be "strictly guarded, and there will be no encumbrances placed upon them, in any way, to interfere with their use."

The religious lessons thus communicated, offer arrangements for defense, by clearing away the orchards below the fort, putting some light artillery in advance of our lines, &c., &c. But as General Joseph Jones' command, our commander was "incapable" of the efforts required eq: such an emergency, and we were without a head to direct, or even to sanction a vigorous defense. Our little army was composed of good materials, but without the skill and energy of officers, perhaps not much confidence could be placed in them, on the occasion required still I believe that Col. Miller had assumed the command, he would have been in the extent of our abilities. Even as our men were placed

I believe the British would have met a narrow reception than they expected; but the die was cast, without a word of consultation, for as my knowledge extends, I was perhaps the youngest officer in Hull's army, yet I seemed to have him unfolded confidence up to that hour; but the idea of a surrender never occurred to me, either from thought or action, until the flag of truce was raised;

and when I largely enquired the object of it, he was evidently disconcerted by my unusual look. If any officer had commanded the command, and been defeated, the result would have been considered as his reputation destroyed, and his life forfeited;—and the result was unfortunate to the best of it. We see how masters are discussed at the present day; the bold measures which preserved New Orleans; and the prompt suppression of the Somer's mutiny have been condemned by thousands. Men who would fly from the glimpse of an enemy, can fight our battles and accomplish wonder's in the chimney corner, and the most devoted patriot may be doomed to disgrace, for a single error in his judgment.

The surrender of Detroit was a gloomy affliction to our country—and especially to those who went off for glory, and returned with shame. Our friends were not disappointed in their expectations of a glorious victory. They had been deceived by their superior officers, and nothing but wilful ignorance can account for the continual repetition of the cry,

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's guns.

You might right, as to the proposition but wrong in the execution. I am not sure, however, on the question of the surrender, for then it would indeed have been a desperate expedient, but on the evening preceding, when

I am exceedingly yours,
ROBERT WALLACE.

Washington City, Feb. 6th, 1843.

Col. —— Our friend, Colonel William O. Butler, has placed in my hands the Licking Valley Register, of the 29th of May last, containing your letter to the Editor on the subject of General Hull's surrender. In reference to the propositions made by various officers to the General, on the morning of the surrender, you have committed an error, unintentionally, I am sure, in regard to me. You say Brigadier Major Jessup proposed to cross the river and spike the enemy's

The following Address, so replete with instruction on several points of peculiarity of Catholicism, we take from the Episcopalian Recorder, a paper in the interests of the Episcopal church, and published in Philadelphia. As we have promised to pay some attention to this great mother of all heresies, this address came to hand very opportunely, as well fitted to expose a system which is trying to find footing among our republican institutions. The "American Protestant Association" is composed of Protestants of nearly all the existing parties. The Address, however, will speak for itself—and we solicit for it the careful perusal of our reader.

A. C.

ADDRESS.

The Board of Managers of the American Protestant Association deem it proper, in submitting their Constitution to the consideration of their fellow citizens, to lay before them a brief exposition of the reasons which have led to this organization, and of the principles on which it is to be conducted. These will be partially understood by a reference to the objects for which the Association has been formed, as set forth in the Second Article of the Constitution. That article is as follows:

"The objects of its formation and for the attainment of which it shall be directed, are,

"1. The advice and encouragement of Protestant Ministers of the Gospel, to give to their several congregations instruction on the differences between Protestantism and Popery.

"2. To call attention to the necessity of a more extensive distribution and thorough study of the Holy Scriptures.

"3. The circulation of books and tracts adapted to give information on the various errors of Popery, in their history, tendency, and design.

"4. To awaken the attention of the community to the dangers which threaten the liberties, and the public and domestic institutions, of these United States, from the assault of Romanism.

It will be seen from this article, that the Association we represent, has grown out of a conviction that our civil and religious institutions are exposed to serious danger from the secret and open assaults of Popery. We are aware that, in avowing this conviction, we may find many or no sympathy among a portion of our Protestant population. The great numerical disparity between Protestants and Romanists in our country, and the general indifference of our citizens, furnish us, in their view, with an adequate defence against all exhortations that may be made to propagate the error of Popery in the United States. It is the prevalence of this feeling, or rather this want of feeling, among Protestants, which chiefly excites our apprehension. We too believe that the Popery of this country is, or yet a perfectly manageable thing. We should think as meanly of Protestantism as the Roman Catholics themselves do, if we questioned the plenary ability of the Protestants of this Union by moral means alone, (for all other means, in such a controversy, we abhor,) to keep Popery within narrow limits and confine its pernicious influences. But while misapprehension, apathy, and false sympathy prevail so to great an extent among Protestants, we are free to confess that we look with deep solicitude upon the extraordinary efforts making by the Papal Hierarchy to obtain a firm footing in this country.

Addressing, as we are, a Protestant population who have free access to the Bible and who reverence its authority, we may be permitted to remind you, that the ground on which the glorious Reformation was undertaken and achieved, was that Popery was the great Antichrist, so minutely delineated in the prophecies of Daniel, in several of the Epistles, and in the Book of Revelation; and that this view has been not only adopted by the great body of Protestant Commentators and Divines, but incorporated in the Creeds and Confessions of nearly all the Reformed Churches. We may further remind you that, according to the "sure word of prophecy" this Antichristian power, after suffering a temporary depression, (as Romanism has done since the 16th century), is in the "last days," to gather up its waning strength, and, allying itself perhaps with civil despotism, to make a final onset upon Christianity—an onset surpassing in fury and malignity all its previous assaults, and to be attended with signal though short-lived success. With these prophecies before you, we would ask you whether there is nothing ominous of evil in the recent movements of the Church of Rome. Just as Protestants were beginning to merge their hatred of her crimes in a feeling of pity for her, a circumstance, that Church was thrown off her torpor, and became recompagned with the energy and ambition of her earlier days. This renovation of her decaying powers is probably to be ascribed, in no small degree to the efforts of the Jesuits. This Order was originally established to oppose the Reformation. Its principles have an adequate explanation in the fact that the name of Jesus (notwithstanding the pains taken of late by some nominal Protestants to make it reputable), is every where a synonyme with falsehood, chicanery and covert crime. The Order became so powerful during the last century and so dangerous to the peace of Europe, that it was expelled—successively—from England, Venice, Portugal, France, Spain and Sicily, and was at length through the influence of Catholic Governments, abolished, and suppressed by Pope Clement XIV, in 1773. But it was restored twenty-eight years ago, by Pius VI, for the purpose of making aggressive movements against Protestantism. Many of the priests, it may be added, in this country, are known to be of this fraternity, and they have several institutions here for training Jesuits. Whatever truth there may be in the conjecture that the revival of Popery is to be ascribed mainly to this Order, the fact that Popery is roving, is indisputable. We see it in India and semi-Christian lands. In Syria, in Persia, in Hindostan, on the coast of Africa, in the Sandwich Islands, and in other countries to which Christian Missionaries have gone to dispense the broad life of the perishings; they are already tracked by Papist emissaries who are busily scattering the seeds of death. We see it still more decisively in Protestant Europe. The Protestantism of the continent is of late assailed by the union of the power of Popery with anomalous and formidable combinations of errorists, and it is rapidly spread in England and Scotland, has excited a general feeling of apprehension among the most intelligent classes of the British people. These movements in the other hemisphere may operate powerfully here. Our connection with the British Isles especially is so intimate that no great political or ecclesiastical changes can take place there, without being sensibly felt by our country. But the Papal See puts too high an estimate upon this country, to trust to the efficacy of mere sympathy for its subjugation. Its demonstrations are of too decided a character and on too grand a scale, to leave us in any doubt as to its ultimate designs.

We do not indeed assent to the doctrine that our duty in this matter as American citizens, and Protestants, is suspended upon the right or wrong resolution of the question whether Popery is destined to acquire an ultimate domination in this country. Regarding it as a system which is proved by its own avowed principles, by the whole tenor of history, and by the present state of all Roman Catholic countries, to be subversive of civil and religious liberty, and destructive to the spiritual welfare of men, we are not disposed to waive opposition to it until we are able to demonstrate its probable triumph over our free institutions. Whatever is to be the final issue of this contest, we feel called upon by what we see already, to unite for the purpose of defending from its insidious assaults, the rich inheritance of liberty and truth which by the mercy of God we have received from our fathers. We see, for example, as the acknowledged leaders of the Roman Church in the United States, a large and increasing body of ecclesiastics, mostly foreigners, who have no ties of birth or blood to attach them to our soil, and whose Bishops are bound by their oath of office to defend and keep the Roman Papacy and the royalties of St. Peter, against all men." We see these ecclesiastics attempting to drive the Holy Scriptures from our systems of public education—and urging arguments (we may add) for the attainment of this object, which assume that there are fundamental and irreconcileable differences between their principles and those on which our social and political institutions repose. We see them boasting that they hold the balance of political power, and, as often as their own ends are to be subserved by it, banding together their deluded followers and exhibiting the serious and alarming character of an avowed religious party in politics—party governed by a foreign head, guided by priests the greater part of whom are naturalized citizens, and impelled by sympathies at war with our republican institutions. We see the secular press, with few honorable exceptions, abstaining from any censure of these bold and threatening movements, and frequently, in communiques four-fifths of which are Protestant, paying a paramount deference to the sentiments and wishes of Romanists, and lending its influence in an incidental but powerful way, to the support of Popery. We see, Spanish Chapels multiplying throughout the Middle and Western States, and, not unfrequently, relying upon native Protestants to fill them. We see their Colleges in Seminaries springing up in every part of the Union, of the Mississippi, and sustained mainly by Protestant families. We see a powerful Association—the Leopold Foundation, organized in Austria, under the patronage of Prince Metternich, a friend of despotism, and Popery, for the purpose of propagating Romanism in this country, and a similar society at Lyons sending here for the same object during the last year, the sum of 177,000 dollars. And now we see a gigantic scheme set on foot in Great Britain for disseminating Popery here by placing large colonies of Papists in our Western States—a scheme whose inherent impracticability does not make it less significant of the designs which are entertained concerning this country.

Addressing, as we are, a Protestant population who have free access to the Bible and who reverence its authority, we may be permitted to remind you, that the ground on which the glorious Reformation was undertaken and achieved, was that Popery was the great Antichrist, so minutely delineated in the prophecies of Daniel, and thereby, a political predominance in the country at large, and an expansion of her power and influence which would be felt throughout the world. And yet the body of our Protestant population, whatever through ignorance, self-security, or whatever cause, remain indifferent to this subject. While Romanism is establishing its proselyting schools throughout the land, to pervert the tender minds of our youth and directing its efforts to destroy the religious character and influence of public Protestant education; and organizing itself under a foreign priesthood, for direct interference with our political elections; and publishing and circulating the most obnoxious assaults upon the doctrines of our Protestant faith; and segregating its adherents into a distinct body, alien in sympathy and interest from the mass of the American people; a large portion of our Protestant citizens, who might with ease arrest the progress of these evils, seem unwilling even to be apprised of their existence. Instead of opposing them, actually contributing itself perhaps with civil despotism to make a final onset upon Christianity—an onset surpassing in fury and malignity all its previous assaults, and to be attended with signal though short-lived success. With these prophecies before you, we would ask you whether there is nothing ominous of evil in the recent movements of the Church of Rome. Just as Protestants were beginning to merge their hatred of her crimes in a feeling of pity for her, a circumstance, that Church was thrown off her torpor, and became recompagned with the energy and ambition of her earlier days. This renovation of her decaying powers is probably to be ascribed, in no small degree to the efforts of the Jesuits. This Order was originally established to oppose the Reformation. Its principles have an adequate explanation in the fact that the name of Jesus (notwithstanding the pains taken of late by some nominal Protestants to make it reputable), is every where a synonyme with falsehood, chicanery and covert crime. The Order became so powerful during the last century and so dangerous to the peace of Europe, that it was expelled—successively—from England, Venice, Portugal, France, Spain and Sicily, and was at length through the influence of Catholic Governments, abolished, and suppressed by Pope Clement XIV, in 1773. But it was restored twenty-eight years ago, by Pius VI, for the purpose of making aggressive movements against Protestantism. Many of the priests, it may be added, in this country, are known to be of this fraternity, and they have several institutions here for training Jesuits. Whatever truth there may be in the conjecture that the revival of Popery is to be ascribed mainly to this Order, the fact that Popery is roving, is indisputable. We see it in India and semi-Christian lands. In Syria, in Persia, in Hindostan, on the coast of Africa, in the Sandwich Islands, and in other countries to which Christian Missionaries have gone to dispense the broad life of the perishings; they are already tracked by Papist emissaries who are busily scattering the seeds of death. We see it still more decisively in Protestant Europe. The Protestantism of the continent is of late assailed by the union of the power of Popery with anomalous and formidable combinations of errorists, and it is rapidly spread in England and Scotland, has excited a general feeling of apprehension among the most intelligent classes of the British people. These movements in the other hemisphere may operate powerfully here. Our connection with the British Isles especially is so intimate that no great political or ecclesiastical changes can take place there, without being sensibly felt by our country. But the Papal See puts too high an estimate upon this country, to trust to the efficacy of mere sympathy for its subjugation. Its demonstrations are of too decided a character and on too grand a scale, to leave us in any doubt as to its ultimate designs.

We do not indeed assent to the doctrine that our duty in this matter as American citizens, and Protestants, is suspended upon the right or wrong resolution of the question whether Popery is destined to acquire an ultimate domination in this country. Regarding it as a system which is proved by its own avowed principles, by the whole tenor of history, and by the present state of all Roman Catholic countries, to be subversive of civil and religious liberty, and destructive to the spiritual welfare of men, we are not disposed to waive opposition to it until we are able to demonstrate its probable triumph over our free institutions. Whatever is to be the final issue of this contest, we feel called upon by what we see already, to unite for the purpose of defending from its insidious assaults, the rich inheritance of liberty and truth which by the mercy of God we have received from our fathers. We see, for example, as the acknowledged leaders of the Roman Church in the United States, a large and increasing body of ecclesiastics, mostly foreigners, who have no ties of birth or blood to attach them to our soil, and whose Bishops are bound by their oath of office to defend and keep the Roman Papacy and the royalties of St. Peter, against all men." We do not, however, rest here. We have a witness at hand who will be deemed both competent and credible to the point of consideration. The witness is Gregory XVI, the reigning Pope, and the document from which we quote is his famous Encyclical Letter of August 15th, 1832.

"From that polluted fountain of indifference flows that absurd and erroneous doctrine or rather raving, in favour and in defiance of liberty of conscience, for which not personal, but ecclesiastical error, the course is opened by that entire and wild liberty of opinion which is every where attempting the overthrow of civil and religious institutions, and which the publishing impudence of some, has held forth as an advantage of religion."

"From hence arise these revolutions in the minds of men; hence, this aggravated corruption of youth, hence this contempt among the people of sacred things, and of the most holy institutions and laws; hence in one word, that per se est per se most dreaded in a State, individual liberty of opinion."

"Again—"Hither tends that worst and never sufficiently to be execrated and detested liberty of price, for the diffusion of all manner of writings which some so loudly contend for and so actively promote."

"And again—"Nor can we augur more consoling consequences to religion and to government, from the zeal of some to separate the church from the state, and to burst the bond which unites the priesthood to the Empire. For it is clear that this union is dreaded by the profane lovers of liberty, only because it has never failed to confer prosperity on both."

"To this testimony, we append the following extracts from theology of Peter Denys, a book which is used in the R. C. College at Maynooth, Ireland. An edition of this work has been published at Melchin, in the Netherlands, recently as the year 1838. It is there distinctly ascertained that—

"Baptized Infidels, such as heretics and apostates usually are; also baptized schismatics, may be compelled even by corporal punishments to return to the Catholic faith, and unity of the Church."

"The reason is because these by baptism have become subject to the Church, and therefore the Church has jurisdiction over them, and the power of compelling them through appointed means to obedience, and to fulfil the obligations contracted in baptism."

"Again it is said by the same author—

"The rites of other Infidels, viz.: pagans and heretics, in themselves considered, are not to be tolerated; because they are so bad, that no truth or advantage for the good of the Church can be thence derived: Except, however, unless greater evils would follow or greater benefits be hindered."

"After stating that heretics are deservedly visited with penalties of exile, imprisonment, &c., this author asks:

"Are heretics rightly punished with death?"

St. Thomas answers (2. 2. quest. XI, art. 3, in corp.)

"...because forges of money or other disturbances of the state are justly punished with death; therefore also heretics, who are forgers of the faith, and, as experience shows, who are guilty of heresy, should be punished with death."

"The documentary evidence of this kind is adduced to prove that Popery is unchanged, to prove that the Popery of the 16th century and the Popery of the 18th are the same. We have it attested by a standard authority in the Roman Church, that it is non possumus recurrere ad beatum. And we have it officially promulgated by the present Pope, the LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE, LIBERTY OF OPINION, the LIBERTY OF THE PRESS, and the SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, are four of the worst evils with which a nation can be cursed. Both as Protestants and as American citizens, we count the rights which are here assailed as among our dearest franchises; and we cannot look on in silence and see them cast into the flames, and casting them down to the lowest parts of the earth, as the ministers of Lucifer." And then he proceeds—We deprive them and their posterity of their dominions and kingdoms."

"Our second witness shall be Pope Pius V. In his bull against Queen Elizabeth, in which he pretends to absolve all her nobles and subjects from their allegiance to her, he affirms that God has constituted the Roman Pontiff."

"Prince over all nations and all Kingdoms; that he might pluck up, destroy, dissipate, ruin, plant and build."

"Our third witness will be Pope Boniface VIII. Then is recited of his in curia regis running thus: "We declare, say, define, pronounce it to be of necessity to salvation, for every human creature to be subject to the Roman Pontiff."

"See the authorities for these qualifications, in Harrow's Treatise, (third chapter) where the reader will find twenty or thirty pages of quotations from the Popes and the writings of standard Roman authors. Some of these works will be found in the Library.

TO BE CONCLUDED.

PAPAL CONFESSION.

A memorial was presented to Pope John XIII, on October 20, 1533, by the Romish Prelates at Bologna, relative to the ecclesiastical abuse and priestly corruption. These Prelates thus acknowledged—"We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ and his apostles delivered more precepts, relative to manners and faith, than are in the Scriptures, and that those without writing were handed down to us." Although we cannot prove this, for among ourselves we confess that we have no proof to make out our traditions, yet the Romish Church maintains it. To tell you the truth, in the days of the apostles, and for many years after them no mention was made of either Pope or Cardinals, or any of those doctrines, laws, constitutions, or regulations, which we now exercise over the nations! They finally suggest to the Pope to use all his power to prevent the Gospel from being read, for this reason, which they honestly adduces: "For whosoever will diligently weigh the Scriptures and consider all the things that are constantly done among us, will find that there is a great difference between them; and that our doctrine and practice are totally repugnant to the Gospel."—Chris. July.

VALUE OF MEMORIALS.—May we never forget that human learning, valuable though it be, can never, alone, qualify us for the service of our Maker. There must be hours of study of the revealed word, of thoughtful, prayerful meditation; of absolute withdrawal even from the innocent and praiseworthy occupations of the world, if we would attain to any degree of usefulness in the Church of the Redeemer. It is then, and then only, that we learn rigidly, although, alas! how imperfectly, to know either God or ourselves.