firs broke out in the smoke house of Meara-From & Auvann, at the corner of Walhout street and Canal, which, in its consequences, has been one of the most distressing that ever occurred in this city.

The smoke house was in the rest, and some what detached from the main building, being compacted with it only by a wooden door and narrow passage-way through which the meat was usually wheeled. It was thought the fire could be coofined to the former, and for that purpose the Pork Houset was closed tight as possible, by shutting all the doors and windows, to restrict the rest and all and hour, the main louding, was find a with smoke, parified sir, and all when the flames hurst through the wooden door con-necting the two buildings, as instatences rear of flame, was precively, and, in the twinking of an pyc, the whole of this web-stantial building was a massed ruins. have been frightfully extensive.
Dr. Locke has handed us the following explanation of the caures of the explosion.
Deix Sirr.—There is no difficulty in assigning a rational, and probably the true, cause of the disasterous explosion which has just occurred in our, city. In every ordinary fire there is indiammable gas (carborated bydrown) generated, which, when common air is present, it coessumed as fast as generated, producing consequently no explosive office; indeed, that gas is the cause of erdinary flame.—It a flew occur in a "building or room, the inflammable gas will be consumed so long as the common aff of that room can supply it, but when that is exhausted, the flame disappears, the combustion becomes unpply it, but when that is exhausted, the
flame disappears, the combustion becomes
flame disappears, the combustion becomes
flame disappears, the combustion becomes
without the proper mixture of common air.— But as this combustible sig bursts out of the windows, or excepts from any opening into the atmosphere, then it may be lighted and will continuous burn. Still the flame will not pase backward into the room, unless commonating rang own his His that he is will be calose of fire's are:

1. When the inflammable air secondown of the sign of the air, where it will be explesd by a f

2. When there is so little air that an accumulation of inflammable air excludes all common air.

From the particular circumstances of the explosion in quation, it seems that the fire in the sample house had generated a large quantity, of inflammable gar, which found vont, without being on five, into the contigious clored pork house; and there cominglod with the common air which this room contained, until an explosive mixture had formed. At this critical point the fire burst into the 'samprimoti' the increaser come.

Something, however, must speedily be done; and, as a dernier resort, foll upon the fol-lowing expedient. As outward opposition could not, in a community like this, stop its coward match, he must make use of the pre-fessed friends and professors of religion thoraselves, to accomplish the dark designal. But how to bring this about was the great difficulty; having succeeded to admirably with Mother Eve, by softly whispering in her car, he adopted the same course with some of the prominent members of the church, and in the float style of subtle elequence, hinted at a sociate water, most. a. ball of course, for that would not take, as the church and all that part of the community sections? coward march, be must make use of the proand all that part of the community actuated by a sense of propriety would remonstrate against it, but a social sitting party, that would bring the young converts, and others, would bring in o young convert, and others, not professing Gollices, techner, not for the purpose of worshipping Gon, or advancing in holiness, or even to talk of religion, but to premnassed and engage in promisecous chit-chat, witticisms, stories, plays &c. &c. calculated to cruso from the mi , &c., &c. calculated to cross from the mind every thing of a celligious, go serious minure. The young mixmhers of the church, at first catter cautiously, and, perhaps, reluctantly, into thisto-passimes, and, and having been long and sufficiently established in their religious purposes, as to openly arow them in such a previous coors event, are at length thrown off their guard, and engage in the fixting screen of the picht. (You say sink) feetive scenes of the night; (we say night, for they last sometimes till teefee or one o'clock,) with as little thoughtfulness as any one present. And pasts, themselves and the church.

One prominent member of the church having made a party, others who think themselves equally respectable and wealthy, not wishing to be out done, follow the example; the company is selected, one or two from this family, and as many from that, while many in the same neighborhood who do not possess quite as much pride, or do not make so great a show, are passed silently by lthough they may possess as much sterling worth as those invited; this is considered in worth as those invited; this is considered a slight, and a just cause of offence. CONGRESS.—With the close of the week, to-night, closes the labors of the present resiston of Congress. For some days part the Senate has been eccupied on subjects of little public import, for instance, Ocn. Jankson prins, has consoured a great portion of time, that should knys been occupied upon national affairs. Party seems to have got to the better of patitolism, and things of national importance. We shall, now, soon learn, what has veen done.
