

was a cobbler—a quiet, easy, lazy, greasy sort of chap, who money, and wanted none—who had no ambition, and but little respect. He mended old boots and old shoes—never paid his and was the wag of the village. He could tell more stories more comic songs, and make more fun than any two men der. He had more friends and about them more

DICTIONARY
 The publisher of the new edition of the Webster's Dictionary is now at work on the new edition of the Webster's Dictionary. The new edition of the Webster's Dictionary is now at work on the new edition of the Webster's Dictionary. The new edition of the Webster's Dictionary is now at work on the new edition of the Webster's Dictionary.

