"And be it further resolved, That the President of the United States, be, and he is hereby authorized, at his discretion, to give to the British Government the notice required by the said second article for the abrogation of the said convention of the sixth of August, eighteen hundred and twenty-seven."

Mr. Allen then moved to amend the second out all after the words 'has,' in the first line, and inserting: "Become the duty of Congress to consider what measures it may be proper to adopt for the security and protection of our citizens now inhabiting or who may hereafter inhabit

Oregon, and for the maintenance of our just title to that territory.' After some conversation as to points of order, the Senate proceeded to vote, and upon the question of agreeing to the amendment of Mr. Allen, it was decided by yeas and nays, as follows: YEAS.—Messrs. Allen, Ashley, Atchison

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress, assembled, That the President of the United States cause notice to be given to ought, to some extent, to defer the moral influence offthat vote. I think if the Senate had Great Britain concerning the territory on the passed the House resolutions, and we had presented the moral spectacle to the world of a united Congress, sustaining the President, the choice of the people, that we would have presented a moral force to Great Britain that would have made that power falter before she determined to bring the controversy to the arbitra-ment of the sword. But, as it is, what will be the substance of the next despatches which will go to England by the next steamer? It will be "Held on; hold your position; prepare your gons; announce your readiness for war; the di visions already manifested in America will be increased; their fears of war will be increased by your threats and at last her Majesty's Government may get the whole of Oregon." These hopes will induce the British Government to profract the negotiations; they will be no more villing to bring them to a conclusion than before; they will say there is the whole commercial interest of America, clamoring against a war under any circumstances; they will say here is a vote of the Senate in favor of a preamble instructing the President to open negotiations again, and they will observe, in a part of the resolution, a declining, on the part of the Senare, to take the responsibility of a positive acts

The Senate does not say they want the treaty ended. No, sir, they want negotiation bargain. traffic to proceed; but they have not declared that the convention shall end. That is the state of the case. The President told us he had done with negotiation, and he recommended the law-making power to take the subject; and the law-making power to take the subject; and, instead of doing so, they divided, faltering, palfering, manucled, hampered, with a frightful unwillingness to meet responsibility—saying oh! we leave it all to your direction. With all these things staring them in the face, do you think Great Britain, whose trident already holds the world in any will greated will got an head the world in awe, will crouch, will get on her knees to us? Do you think you will encourage Great Britain to give up any thing by showing your unwillingness to claim any thing? Not at all. I shall, for one, vote, if I stand alone, as gainst such a proceeding, trusting that the final result of the business may produce a resolution more in accordance with the interests and the dignity of the Senate.

Mr. Crittenden rose in reply and said ha would not suffer imputations such as those which the gentlemen had made against the action and character of the Senate, to pass altogether with out notice. What, asked Mr. C., is his commist sion? and whence is it derived? and who authorized him to assume here the air and tone of guage when addressing the Senate? "On what meat does this our Casar feed? that he is to rise here and lecture us for decisions to which we have deemed it our duty to come? Where did he come from? And let me add, there is another and a more difficult lesson which I fear the Senator has yet to learn; and that is, to know himself. When he knows himself a little better, he will be in circumstanclause of Johnson's amendment by striking ces better to appreciate what is due from him in the Senate. He may vaunt himself in his assomed office of exclusive vindicator of the Presis dent of the United States, and defender of the honor of the House of Representatives ; but that gives him no warrant to treat this body with a want of consideration. As a member of the Senate, I feel that its dignity has been assailed, and its character traduced. My own personal share in the remarks of the gentleman; and my own personal sense of injury and offfence, are absorbed in the stronger conviction of the disrespect which has been manifested toward this body. The Senate has adopted the substance of a resolution which I had myself the honor to offer, and the gentleman has self authorized to characterize a resolution which had just received the sanction of this body, as a poor, paltry, faltering, tremulous thing. I can tell that Senator that the majority of this Senate and the humble individual who now address es it are as little moved by the dread of any re-sponsibility, but that of doing wrong as the chairman of the Committee of Foreign Rela-

The Senator desired to know, he said, under what commission I speak I speak under a commission of that character which I bear as a man: a character as insulfied, sir, as that of the Senater from Kentucky, or any of those with whom he acts. I speak, sir, under the commission which a sense of duty imposes upon a Senator as deeply interested in the welfare of his country as that Senator, or those with whom he acts. * He asks me under what commission I defend the House of Representatives? I ask him under what commission he presumes to bethe organ of the Senate, and the ceper of its character?
> Mr. Crittenden. I do not; but, as one of the body, I think it right to defend myself, and Mr. Allen. The Senator speaks for the whols body. I speak of the whole body. The differs ence between the Senator and myself is, that he speaks for the body, and I speak of the acts of the body. I have as much interest in the Senate, in its character and conduct, as the Senator from Kentucky. I am part and parcel of the body, and the proportion which I bear to the body can neither be increased or diminished by the remarks of the Schator. His remarks in reference to individuals here, and his grotesque faces cannot have the least effect. His culogial, connot elevate them nor his sneers depress. I want to know what it is that I have done to the Senator which makes him so hasty, on every occasion when I speak, to rise up and sources his rebukes to me? Has he a private pique? I Duffie, Mangam, Miller, Morehead, Pearce, Phelps, Simmons, Speight, Upham, Webster, guardianshin of the Senate. I do not deep the guardianship of the Senate. I do not deny the Senator's right. acts of any branch of the Government? When we speak of an act which has been done, shall we be met with the charge: You are attacking a branch of the Government; you must not in terfere with it; you must not refer to what has heretofore been done by Congress, or you will incar the charge of making an attack upon Conhas carried him rather too far in the execution of his assumed commission. The long practice of the gentleman as Attorney General may have given him a fondness for the sort of advocacy which he exercises here; perhaps his leaning that way is so great that he does not recollect he is not now filling that office. I can account for his distorted view of the subject in no other light. Not a word can be said but, outspringing his broad shield, he cries, "Stop; not one inch further. Behold the shield of Achilles-not in his tent, oh, no-Achilles advanced to war, shield on arm!" Mr. Crittenden made further remarks in reply .- I trust, said he, there is at least one member of this body for whom I have a right to speak, and he happens to be one who is assailed by the Senator from Onio. Sir, I am content to learn from a blackguard how to improve my manners, or from him who has the slightest, flimsiest claim to be called a gentleman.

If I have acted a part, it is a part I intend ed, and I doubt whether the langauge I employed was considered farcical by any other than the Senator from Ohio. I presume to be among the humblest of my friends; but, whatever may be the deficiency of my capacity. I hold in detestation. I feel an irresistible inclination to put down arrogance and impudence, from whatever quarter it may come. I have no doubt it the rebukes and animadversions of my best friends have not entirely cured me of, much less am I to be schooled out of it by such a teacher as the Senator from Ohio.

Sir I ventured to ask by what commission the Senators here—by what commission he undrtook to assume an oracular position, and arraign the Senate on a charge of paltering in a double sense; of hiding behind the bush-of committing acts of humiliation.

I asked by what warrant any Senator dared to address the Senate in that manner? By what respectable in the Union. Sir the gentleman can say nothing of that State that will not meet of her than I, one of her neighbors. But the gentleman will excuse me from being a little inredulous as to the extent of that commission. The commission of which he speaks is to perform the part of a gentleman. The State of Ohio never gave a commission to any one to violate the rules of decorum; to stand up with assumed tate to Senators what course they ought to pursue. The commission of the gentleman comes from another source. I wish I were at liberty, consistently with the rules of order, to say from mind on the subject.

Among the least, I think, of the gentleman's error,—I had liked to have said presumptions—it seems his belief that I have made him a particular object of attention, and that I have been extremely anxious on all occasions to reply to him. Well, sir, there may be some object of ambition to be attained by having a formidable name, or a great man for an antagonist; to attack an Ar man's fortune, and defeat detract nothing from

Mr. Allen again observed that he did not intend to say any thing he had said to offer an insult to any Senator; and if it were assumed that he did, he would only say that it was an assumption without justification.

The question then recurred on ordering the resolution, as amended to a third reading, and it was decided as follows:

Mr. Crittenden's Speech.

Mr. Crittenden's speech in reply to Mr. Allen will be found in to-day's Register. It is brilliant, severe. Mr. C., is truly a chivalrous man-a gallant, fearless Kentuckian, always aged 90. The Marquis was quite blind, bearing himself nobly. Seldom has a man received so severe and so deserved a rebuke as Mr. Crittenden gave the wind-pipe of Ohio. He flay'd him alive. Poor Allen! Ah! but does this blusterer deserve pity? Full of braggartism, loud windy courage-all wind-of bold pretence, without a spark of true modest courage, he has richly merited the ponderous blows of Benton's fate in the other House. heavy knife, and the keen sharp thrusts of Crit tenden's smoother and more pointed instrunent. The general impression is that Santa Anna will return to Mexico, and again assume the reins of Government. Rumors of a battle between the troops commanded by Gen. Taylor and the Mexicans were in circulation at New Orleans. There can be little doubt, that Mexico is preparing for a contest with this country.

Oregon Resolutions.

The Oregon Resolutions as they passed the Senate place the entire responsibility of "Notice" upon Mr. Polk. This is right. If the action of Government should lead to disastrous consequences, the President should be held responsible. The power of negotiation belongs to him, and his attempt to shift the responsibility from himself to Congress, does not exhibit the magnanimity and moral courage which should ever characterize the Chief Executive officer of this great Republic. But he cannot now evade the just responsibility of his station.

The Senate was engaged until the 16th in discussing the Oregon question. On that day the discussion came to a close, and the amendment of Mr. Johnson of Maryland, was adopted. Gen. Housron .- This gentleman delivered a speech on Oregon, the day before the debate closed. He goes for the "whole or none."

Loss of the Steamer Oregon.

The splendid steamer Oregon, from Providence to New York, went ashere on Saturday morning about 4 o'clock, in Hurl Gate, on what is termed the Gridiron rock, and it is feared she will be a total loss. Providentially the passengers were all saved by the steam ferry boat Astoria.

A fatal affray took place last week in Greenup county, Ky., between Samuel Glover and Hugh Jackson, brothers-in-law, in which the former was killed. Jackson surrendered himself to a magistrate, and after a hearing was discharged.

DIED

On Saturday, the 18th inst. Mrs. EMILY READ consort of William S. Read, in the 28th year o her nge. The deceased had been confined to her bed by severe illness, for several months previous to her death. Amidst her protracted and unmitigated sufferings, she was ever upheld by the unshaken faith of a Christian, and the fortitude of a true woman. She had been many years a member of the Baptist church, was a shining light, and an ornament of that denomination of chris-tians, and died in the full triumphs of the be liever's hope. She has left an affectionate husband, with a large circle of friends, to mourn her early death, and a smiling little daughter too young to feel its irreparable loss. But why She has exchanged sufferings of Life, for the glories of Immortality

"Oh! thou, who, o'er thy wife's cold bier, Sheddeth the bitter drops like rain, Know that a brighter, happier sphere Will give her to thy arms again."

THE unparalleled success has given such a increased demand for Dr. Duncan's Expecte rant Remedy for the prevention of Consump tion and diseases of the Liver, that the Proprietor has been compelled to open a Western Office: particularly for the accommodation o those offlicted living in the West, who heretofore have been compelled to visit the Philadelphia Office, or send at an expense and trouble. This notice is therefore to inform all afflicted with a disease of a Consuptive nature that his medicines and advice can always be obtained a this Western Office. It is therefore to bo hoped that the many thousands who are troubled with a cough, pain in the breast and side, shortness of breath, difficulty of rising up and throwing off the vicid phlegm and matter that settles in the air tubes and lungs, spitting of blood and soreness of the throat, and other symptoms that will soon lead to Consumption; will take timely advice and procue a few bottles of Dr. Duncan's Expectorant Remedy, which is certain to arrest Kentucky Bank recovers over One Million of the very first seed of disease, that takes root

Let us see what the Press, Dr. White, and his Patients, and the Public say of the remedies which have gained such flattering and extensive celebrity over the whole Ohio, Mississippi; Missouri and Arkansas Valleys, and wherever they have come within the knowledge and reach of the public-that seem to be so eminently worthy of
